Part One: Looking Forward to 2012—Shifting Towards Greater Self-Empowerment

I kind of felt invisible this year as I didn't conduct a single work-shop. I was so intensely involved in my own growth this year that remained my focus. The lovely Kandis has kept you apprised of our travels to Egypt and China, and I also spent a considerable time in South America. The learning for the new book series has been profound. I'm beginning to understand how the sacred sites and the cosmos work together in the same way your consciousness does.

Yes, you are cosmic in nature. It's a misconception that you build your body from the Earth, rather you build it with cosmic dust. These new books are so exciting however, there's a lot more to share from this year.

In this year end message I will touch ever so briefly on several massive trends from this year, all positive, leading us into 2012:

- Giant shifts in collective consciousness that sees people taking responsibility for governing themselves, taking back their power,
- New insights that will affect the price of crude oil, and where it's produced will eliminate the 'fear' of peak oil as humanity transitions away from using oil as a fuel,
- An acceleration in collective consciousness towards nuclear fusion and a rejection of nuclear fission, thereby setting the stage for a whole new energy world.
- The Earth regenerating herself and producing more fresh water and de-polluting H₂O₂ water issuing from the central rift in the Atlantic spreads!
- Huge advances made with 'implosion'— pollution free and 'cost free' fuels which will ultimately power our generators and engines,
- A way to change the energy in your home and office for pennies, literally,
- Huge changes afoot in solar power generation which will lower its cost and eliminate its polluting footprint
- Tips and tools for more harmony and to ameliorate chaos in the new year

In the first version of the existing book series, in 2008, I outlined how governments would fail and boy, have we seen a lot of that in 2011. People tend to focus on Tunisia and Libya and Egypt, however, the 'occupy' movements in the United States are part of that same new energetic. These movements have, in my view, been wrongfully criticized in the media. These movements are all about people taking responsibility rather than giving their power over to government. These are simply the early stages. Expect much more peaceful protest and pressure for governmental changes all around the world. We're all waking up!

The opportunity for each and every one of you is beyond what you can imagine. The Earth is going to look after herself just fine. Collective consciousness is going to deliver non-polluting energy. A new financial system will emerge and it will be better for all ... but there's going to be a lot of chaos along the way. What are you going to do consistently every day so that none of the chaos affects you? In the subsequent sections I'll reveal more details of what I see occurring in this most exciting new year and I'll provide you with some suggestions about how to invest in yourself in 2012 for greater health and joy! ©Pure Leadership Inc. 2012

Part Two: Shifting Away from our Traditional Energy Sources

Much of the main stream has been trumpeting nuclear fission as a non-polluting source of energy. The Pure Leadership readers know that fission is pollution by definition. Therefore, the Fukushima nuclear disaster we saw this year was necessary, though unfortunate, to shift Japan away from nuclear fission as a source of power generation. Nuclear fission will now begin to fade away as humanity has seen the risks associated with it. I visited with a nuclear expert who said that the planning of those Japanese nuclear facilities was very thorough and the event that occurred was so unlikely as to almost be implausible, however, it DID happen. It was necessary for humanity to shift collective consciousness away from nuclear fission. Remember, the BP disaster in the Gulf last year? Well, that event shifted humanity's consciousness to reject oil as a fuel. So let's talk about oil.

I live in Calgary. Calgary is an oil town. So what do these coming advancements mean for our local economy? I suggest that they'll have a very large impact. The long term trend in power generation has been to move up the hydrogen chain. As society moves away from coal to oil, less carbon is produced. The transition from oil to natural gas results in even less carbon production. Within the context of hydrocarbons this is a prudent trend.

The price of oil has been affected by its shortage and the perception of peak oil. Peak oil is a term coined to mean that we are nearing the maximum rate with which oil can be extracted from the earth. However, it will soon be shown widely that oil is generated by the Earth herself (abiogenic petroleum origin). It is one of Earth's five natural lubricants. The historical wisdom has been that oil is a by-product of plant mass transformed by millions of years of heat and pressure. The scientist Thomas Gold began presenting a different theory for the origins of oil back in the 1970's. The Russians, and I suspect others, began exploring for oil in bedrock a long time ago. In fact, there was a well drilled in Alberta based upon this premise some years ago. What was very controversial when Gold first suggested it will become more widely known as truth shortly. The Earth produces oil. This shift in the understanding of how oil is formed is going to change oil exploration dramatically. For us Calgarians we'll want to have some plans to adapt to the resultant shift in our local economy. For the rest of the world this awareness will be wonderful news. After all, the largest market in the world is the oil market. This means a huge amount of the gross domestic product (what people generate) is expended on a substance which will fall dramatically in price. Today, the oil price is a weighty tax on humanity, both economically and environmentally.

Just as the Earth 'manufactures' oil and natural gas within her crust, she manufactures fresh water as well. Pure Leadership News has brought you some great articles this year showing how fresh water can be captured from the atmosphere. For example, Stan Sauerwein brought us the story of:

- "An Australian student who developed a device which can be used to water plants in the desert. Basically the student came up with a way to use a solar-powered turbine to condense water droplets from the air, accumulate that water underground and irrigate crops. A small working model of the device was able to collect a litre of water a day in the arid outback of Australia. Click here to read more."

As you're aware the central rift of the Atlantic Ocean has been issuing H₂O₂ for several years now ("Change is Natural" p.405). This water is incapable of pollution and also 'de-pollutes' all water it comes into contact with. Over the next 12 months it will be discovered that the Earth is making more fresh water in her crust.

Two great fears of humanity; lack of oil and lack of fresh water, will be removed. Couple this with H₂O₂ depolluting existing waters and the accelerated rate of plant regeneration and much 'earth-based' fear will be released from collective consciousness and she can, will and is regenerating herself. Time to drop the fear generation. ©Pure Leadership Inc. 2012

Part Three: Shifting Towards Pollution-Free Energy Sources

In the past years I've investigated a lot about the new coming changes in energy for humanity. Here I'm talking about fuels. I continue to say that we're on the brink of a shift in collective consciousness towards new types of energies. There are sea changes afoot which will see humanity embrace the imploding technologies and reject the exploding technologies. This means we'll move from 'anti-life' fuels to 'pro-life' fuels. This is consistent with the very strong 'green' thinking that has moved to the forefront. For example, I was introduced this year to an engine that runs on inert gases. This closed system is an imploding system with zero pollution and on 44 cents of inert gases the engine will run for 144,000 miles.

Then there's Paul Pantone's ongoing work with magnetism, and the work of many others in the same vein, all bringing forward engines fueled by water (see Brown's gas or HHO for those who wish to familiarize themselves). I feel they'll become market ready when humanity makes the shift in consciousness in 2013 or 2014. Watch this space.

In the meantime, the Pure Leadership News Network has been monitoring some of the new scientific awareness about energy. Stan Sauerwein published on the Network this year stories that:

- "As well, Canadian researchers have even looked to our oceans and lakes in new ways to help solve a global demand for energy. For example, an article on the Network explains how two Ryerson University researchers have taken the search for nondestructive energy sources underwater. Bodies of water offer predictable amounts of energy, and in some cases, require smaller infrastructure (and less capital investment) to extract energy. Even better, harnessing marine energy is also more environmentally sustainable." Click here to read more.
- "Lastly, using our own motion to generate power is being studied too. Pure News Network reported how a couple of researchers have developed a novel energy-harvesting technology known as 'reverse electrowetting'. With it, mechanical energy can be converted to electrical energy. A micro-fluidic device consisting of thousands of liquid micro-droplets interacting with a novel nano-structured substrate can generate power as we move. Imagine the freedom such a device would offer people living in remote areas currently without power. Just walking about as they normally would during the day could generate the power and store it in batteries that they need to light their way at night." Click here to read more.
- Other discoveries noted on the News Network regarding developments that make batteries that can be 72% more efficient. The potential for energy freedom for all is not as far away as some may think." Click here to read more.

In the third edition of the books I elucidated this shift of consciousness that is required for everyone to utilize these new inventions, including nuclear fusion at room temperature. Pure New Network reported on advances in this area as well this year.

- "Controlled experiments for cold fusion have been conducted in Russia, California, Italy, and Japan. They have consistently proven cold fusion is a reality. In an article on the News Network, we've learned how Osaka University professor, Dr. Yoshiaki Arata, performed a demonstration of cold fusion just months ago. This year, Andrea Rossi's Fusion Energy Catalyzer was tested in a number of different scenarios too. On January 14 2011 in fact, Rossi demonstrated a nickel hydrogen fueled low energy nuclear reaction (LENR) reactor that generated power at room temperature." Click here to read more.

Humanity is on the brink of altering the energy we harness, and the shift is going to be so amazing that this planet will never be the same. Imagine how low cost non-polluting energy changes our environment literally but also socially and economically. This is exciting stuff and it's coming from innovators, not from government boondoggles with corn and wind.

The advances that companies like Natcore Technology are making in the world of solar are absolutely wonderful. Many people see wind and solar as the natural evolution to escape from oil. I've always felt that wind is misconceived as it has such a low conversion factor (1-2), however, solar has tremendous potential. I am quick to remind the informed Pure Leadership aware folks that electricity generated by solar is still 'exploding' electrons which interferes with your chakras. When solar is coupled with Rodin coils though, the result is 'imploding electricity'. This thinking will represent a massive leap forward to 'non-polluting' electricity, and you don't have to wait for the future. You can do it today for an investment of 25 cents. Simply tape a penny on the back of the plastic cover of the electrical outlets in your house and office and feel the difference as the 'exploding' electricity is converted back into a sine wave. I've digressed, let's get back to Natcore.

What Natcore's pioneering is driving down the cost of manufacturing solar panels with room temperature anti-reflective coatings, and raising their efficiency with breakthroughs in stabilizing black silicon and potential advances with quantum dots. What many don't know is that solar panels are currently constructed through a high heat toxic process. There are false economies when we look at solar until this issue of toxic production is dealt with. Just as most electrical cars have a larger environmental footprint than those burning gas, the entire value chain of 'green' energy has to be addressed. Natcore's nano-coating is non toxic and can be applied at room temperature, therefore it has the potential to revolutionize how solar panels are manufactured.

Information about these advances in solar technology were again reported on the Pure News Network:

- "Scientists in Israel are fine-tuning nanocrystal or quantum dots for high efficiency solar cells that can help to maximize a solar cell's ability to harvest light. They are looking to find new ways to bring an electrical charge to the dots—each about one-millionth the size of the period at the end of this sentence." Click here to read more.
- "Meanwhile others are working on allied technologies to support solar power's effectiveness. For example, the News Network carried an article about how a device has been made that helps test the efficiency of photovoltaics such as solar cells so they can be made more efficient." Click here to read more.

This shift to green thinking has taken hold in collective consciousness and it is a welcome and timely shift in 2012 for all of us here on planet Earth. Natcore's advances are moving towards commercialization and are targeted to lower the cost of solar to be competitive with existing generation methods. This is a sea-change for solar. ©Pure Leadership Inc. 2012

PL Holiday Message by Jas Malcolm Part Four: Reclaiming Health and Natural Healing

I hope that now you are starting to get the picture? Each year you're seeing massive changes, positive changes, in the Earth and her inhabitants and 2012 will be no exception! Did you know less people are getting sick? Yes, I've been told that some hospitals in the United States have had to shut down for lack of business :)

In the upcoming year we'll see a huge push from 'the other team' to shut down naturopathic medicine. It is so offensive that people doing great work have to suffer the abuse of the 'powers that be', but these souls are up to the challenge. Pure Leadership provided some small support this year for one such gentleman, Dr. Burzynski "A medical doctor and Ph.D biochemist who won the largest, and possibly the most convoluted and intriguing legal battle against the Food & Drug Administration in American history". I highly recommend his movie Cancer is Serious Business to give everyone perspective. I'm happy to say that the 'other teams' persecution of naturopathy and natural medicines will be strongly opposed by humanity and by mid-2012 the 'old way of big money pharmaceutical medicine' will experience a fatal blow from humanity, in a very unambiguous way. I'm sure you'll agree that this, again, will result in a massively positive shift in our society and, although cost is not the factor I'm most concerned with, you will appreciate the massive resources this can free up in society. And the shift of health will continue into the fields as well. The law suit initiated by hundreds of thousands of organic farmers against Monsanto is a blessing for all of humanity. Monsanto's abuse of power, science and government has to be, and will be, brought to an end. ©Pure Leadership Inc. 2012

Part Five: Poverty Consciousness Shifting out of the World Financial Markets

The review of these externalities for the reader is so that you can relax and remember the rapture – the divine flow in all things. Fear based concerns about the Earth are misplaced. Let us review a very important principle taught in all workshops.

If I meet someone begging on the sidewalk, I can feel sorry for them and give them money. That is fear based and accentuates their problem. It's like people with concerns going to assist earthquake victims. The energy of 'concern' they carry exacerbates the problem. If I feel wealthy and generous then I can give to the begging individual and the energy they receive from me will be more important than the contribution. Similarly, if I'm feeling wealthy and grateful and I go to assist a victim, they'll be benefited. This is important to remember because the Earth is going to experience increased earthquake activity in 2012 as she re-balances herself. This is a natural process. Understand that if you live on the Earth this is some of the risk we eternal beings expose ourselves to – no risk – no joy.

All this reference to poverty consciousness, versus wealth consciousness, brings us full circle to a discussion of the economy. As the reader's aware, I'm on record as saying that the financial economy will continue to breakdown in order that a better, higher vibration, 'exchange based' economy can emerge. This is something always on the top of everyone's mind because we're entitled to have some energetic foundation upon which we can guide our lives and personal growth. I wish I could tell you that the financial volatility is all behind us, however, if you're following the European quagmire you may realize that there are still some 'big shoes' to fall.

How does this play out? I believe the Euro fails. The creators will continue to spin and spin and spin to try to convince you that their original decisions were the best but, the Euro as a sole currency for Europe fails. From a Pure Leadership perspective you'll readily understand that individual nations require individual currencies to self actualize in a world rising in vibration. The Euro goes away through a multitude of government machinations. This will bring some further financial chaos. If you study the 2008 financial collapse you'll see that the United States printed money to save their insolvent banking system. The Europeans, on the other hand, did not. They tried to preserve the value of their currency. I see no way around the Europeans having to print Euros (directly or indirectly) as one of their strategies to try to save the Euro banking system. This will de-value the Euro. But, and here is the most important question, what is it devaluing against?

Well, we continue to hear people are 'running' into the US dollar as a 'safe haven'. I remain non-plussed that people consider the U.S. economy that is sporting inflation of some 12% and unemployment of 22% (real as opposed to government declared) as a country able to 'back' their currency. I continue to raise awareness with the U.S. media and government 'telling' the rest of the world how to fix their problems when the US created most of them. What you're witnessing is all governments of the world debasing their currencies. It is like a race to the bottom, and the people of the world suffer a debasement of their life savings. I have always proffered gold as the way to be outside of this debacle because it is the only asset that is not simultaneously someone's liability. It is the only way to be outside of the financial system.

I feel that my readers may feel gold is some sort of academic solution for them, however, gold has appreciated 20% per year for the past 10 years (through 2010) and 10% this year (2011). That means it has been the most profitable market to be in. There are more ways to buy bullion today than when I first started recommending it. The Spratt Physical Gold Trust and even the Royal Canadian Mint program give you some options of where to store liquidity. You've been witness (e.g. Argentina and Russia and Wells Fargo cash machine) where the banks of the world have refused people trying to withdraw their cash. I do believe that the Canadian banking system is in better shape, but in better shape than what? If the banks of the world had to 'mark to market' their assets you'd see the banking system is insolvent. In the 3rd Edition of "Who's in Control of the Powerful You" I outlined some of the debts of Canadian banks (off balance sheet) and the numbers are frightening. So remember, it is your cash, and your savings, and you are responsible to look after yourself.

What can we look forward to? Perhaps the United States, who increasingly have a currency that the other governments don't want (the Central Banks were the largest purchasers of gold in Q3 of this year), will launch a new currency backed by silver. Eric Spratt feels silver is the best investment for the next ten years. Mr. Spratt is very thoughtful and when I say gold I do mean gold and silver. My bullion assets are probably 70% gold and 30% silver and I think I'm underweighted in silver.

I continue to suggest to anyone who will listen that gold and silver bullion are what I recommend for savings. Again, you want the bullion or an investment backed by bullion. I do not buy ETFs (exchange traded funds) because the con-stating documents give too much leeway to managers to substitute 'non-bullion'.

When it comes to putting your savings into the stock market, 'buyer beware'. The markets today are casinos.

No stocks are for the faint of heart as we don't have true free markets. The US plunge protection team continues to manipulate the markets. This large down draft in gold from $1950 to $1550 that we've experienced since summer was, I believe, designed to remove gold's 25% gain and deter people from holding gold shares. I suspect it was also orchestrated with cooperation of the U.S. government to allow JP Morgan and other big money center banks ('the commercials') to cover their naked shorts in the gold and silver markets. Heavens, even some mainstream financial houses have begun telling their customers about gold (10 years into the bull market). This becomes a buying opportunity, but only for speculative and informed investors.

Remember gold could fall to $1200 but at today's prices I continue to buy aggressively.

Oops, I went sideways, I was supposed to be talking about stocks. This market is so manipulated stocks are a gamble, pure and simple. I do find the major and mid tier gold and silver stocks to be at bargain prices unseen in the 10 year bull market. The prices of the major companies haven't fallen too much, and certainly not to 2008 levels, but these companies have much improved their businesses so you can find lots of these companies trading at .4 to .6 their Net Asset Value at $1750 gold. If gold were to catch up to inflation you'd have a gold price of $2,500 to $5,000 dollars. This is not a prediction. Gold and silver shares are for those who have nerves of steel.

I continue to suggest gold and silver, in physical form, to store wealth, not because you'll make money, but because you'll retain your savings and you'll have flexibility to make a wider range of choices during these floundering markets and the emergence of the new economy. Job one is always to maintain your flexibility, pay down debt and stay off of credit cards as much as possible.

I cannot emphasize enough taking responsibility for your decisions about your home, job, finances and savings. The bankruptcy of MF Global revealed a level of fraud that is disconcerting. Segregated accounts were effectively stolen from (my words). Through the use of re-hypothecation of individuals, cash and securities the brokerage created leverages of 100:1 which the brokerage used to bet on European bonds. The bet went to wrong way. The investors accounts were plundered for $1.2 billion and the Chicago Mercantile Exchange did NOT protect the segregated accounts. This is, in effect, a failure of the market process as we know it. Even in the 2008 financial calamity the market worked. Here, it was violated. Segregated brokerage accounts were effectively used, and lost, by the brokerage. I'm simplifying to make the point, but my point is this; 2012 will have lots of chaos without you losing your savings. Caveat Emptor. I'll blog on this more fully in the new year.

It always seems funny to me to talk about the economy though, as much as I love to, because the economy is a group dynamic. The real game afoot for those embracing Pure Leadership, is not about everyone else, it is about you. The best investment you can make is- plain and simple- an investment in you. ©Pure Leadership Inc. 2012

Part Six: Taking Care of Yourself-Your Greatest Investment for 2012

2012 is going to be an amazing year, because so many folks have been misled and continue to stray into fear. It's going to have quite a few moments where you'll want to be using these tools and the others in the books. There's nothing that will happen in 2012 though that will upset the person of high self esteem - self love.

Remember the Mayan calendar ending is a non-event that happened in 1998 when the Divine Grid was re-anchored to Earth. Everyone on the planet today is on the Homo Luminous path. The chaos that is necessary for the shift of humanity's collective consciousness to a homo-luminous state is going to "rock on" in 2012. One of your gifts is the 'gift of choice'. That's right, free will. The Pure Leadership books have been delivered to give you the tools to embrace these changes in your personal life. When you do, you will manifest and receive what you desire. Remember, in Lift the Veils to Reality I reveal you're entitled to love, bliss, rapture and abundance. If you don't have them now and continually in 2012 - well that's your mirror.

You change the world by changing you. The book "Lift the Veils to Reality" remains more relevant today than ever before, as does the belief work contained in "Change is Natural" (p.103-164). Daily, I suggest, you focus on a manifestation exercise ("Change is Natural" p.453) and spend some dedicated meditation quiet time. Pay attention to everything in your life because your life is a mirror for what's going on within your energy field. There are no coincidences. Everything that happens in your life you have cozen on some level. The first defense is to remove the limiting beliefs that your daily mirrors reveal and install a new high vibration belief ("Change is Natural" p.103-164) Here we have provided an abbreviated list of some practical and easy tools that you can consider incorporating into your life, facilitating greater health and happiness. We have covered many of these suggestions both in the book series and on our blog site as "Your Spiritual Toolbox". We have included page references to the books and links to the blog so that you can easily find more information about any of these easy to use tools.

1. Spend time barefoot. Also take a walk in nature everyday to ground yourself from collective consciousness
2. Employ a daily manifestation exercise (Change is Natural p.453)
3. Monitor your mirrors (Change is Natural p.103-164). Your life is always a reflection of your beliefs.
4. Take a shower in the dark so that your body can absorb more cosmic light. (Change is Natural p.416)
5. Darken your room when you go to bed so there are no photons present.
6. Practice graciousness and live with the feeling of gratitude. (Change is Natural p.245)
7. Forgive everyone to release negative thoughts from your field. (Change is Natural p.231)
8. Spend time around water to benefit from the vortices that will boost your immune system, fortify your light force energy, and raise your vibration.
9. Hold some liquidity outside the financial system in the form of gold and silver bullion, and even a bit of food.
10. Eat organically
11. Exchange lots of hugs every day
12. Quiet time each day to focus on you – yes a meditation to connect into the infinite.
13. If you're ruffled in the moment, how about using the code 3-23 often and 5,5-5,5,1 to calm your mind. Repeated usage thousands of times will change your field forever. Or, how about simply, "god rise me above" to lift yourself out of collective consciousness.
14. Blessing your food through prayer or the code 9-9-5 (Change is Natural p.410)
15. Using the word "Savandah" (Change is Natural p.404)
16. Ensure that you are drinking enough water -we suggest dividing your body weight (in lbs) in half, then consuming that many fluid ounces of water (e.g. if you weigh 120lbs, drink 60oz. of water a day).
17. Sorry, but stop alcohol and 'drug' consumption. Your body is rising in vibration and it can no longer handle alcohol and recreational drugs. Similarly, avoid misconceived ceremonies such as ayahuasca. Ayahuasca has risen in mystic proportions. It is toxic and severely so. Do not confuse yourself with a South American shaman whose DNA has been adapted over thousands of years to conduct this ceremony. ©Pure Leadership Inc. 2012

Part Seven: Message for Workshop Attendees-Override and Master Guards

I feel it important that people understand that as more of your spirit enters your body in 2012 you will experience physical challenges. Your spirit will be so active in 2012 that your changing physical will have difficulty keeping up. When the shift happened in September 2011 I began to notice all sorts of changes in my physical. Firstly, my left knee swelled up like a big softball and I walked with a limp for awhile. As that went down, as of writing this note, my right arm is very sore and difficult to hold over my head. Am I ill and requiring medical attention? No, it is a 'mirror' of what I'm resisting with my complete soul entering my body. In September you received a whole new chakra system. I'm not suggesting you don't seek medical advice if you require it, I'm sharing perspective as our bodies are clearing and adjusting to the new high vibrations. Where there is resistance, well that's a mirror for work to be done. The medical professionals would have difficulty diagnosing what is going on in my body, for instance. Cranial sacral work is quite helpful at this stage as your body is seeking a new rhythm. The most elegant way to change your life and the most thorough entails the processes outlined in "Lift the Veils to Reality", those dealing with Master Guards and the Override. Up until September 2011, 97% of all people had an active Override. With the shift in humanity in September that number is now 47%. If you're reading this note, odds are you're in the 47%.

I wish to spend a moment updating those who've read the book and are using the Master Guard/Override processes. The changes to humanity in September were so massive that most people have been going through massive shifts in their physical and their personal worlds. This will continue at least through Q1 of 2012. I examine my Override daily to assure that it is calm and feels safe. Yes, that maintenance meditation, I've taught and outlined in the book, I do it daily. If you've missed a day, well your Override is active again. I've learned so much about consistently doing my work to get the rewards. Let me review some of the factors that can re-activate your Override, and therefore re-create your low vibration beliefs and turn your life upside down.

- Allowing fear to enter your life on any level, often triggered by an active inner child, or
- Bumping up against major beliefs you've not dealt with, such as 'I can't go out to play until my work is done', or 'it is impossible to be one with the [infinite creator,god etc]', or
- Succumbing to the influence of collective consciousness, which carries the two beliefs in the prior bullet, or succumbing to the influence of ancestral DNA, or
- Bumping up against 'laws' you've created using words like 'always' and 'never' in this lifetime or past ones.

I continue to pay attention to my mirrors continually and seek out low vibration beliefs, and active inner children. I know the best way to handle this is the Override work so that is how I maintain myself.

Hugs to each of you, you are more special than even you know. I hope to deliver a new book series for you soon that will answer many questions, but the simple answer to all things ... love yourself unconditionally ... that is the eternal message of our Pure Leadership team to you. ©Pure Leadership Inc. 2012
